At Your Service...

People who are blind or have other severe disabilities employed by nonprofit agencies under the JWOD Program provide many specialized services to meet the needs of Federal and State agencies as well as commercial businesses. From administrative services and medical transcription to laundry and recycling projects, an ever-widening range of services is being provided.

Technological advances and adaptive equipment help individuals who are blind or severely disabled perform their jobs effectively. Data entry, mail and distribution services, repair services, telemarketing and food services are only a few examples.

JWOD services consistently meet or exceed Federal quality standards and are provided when and where you need them.

EMPHASIS ON QUALITY...

Time after time, services provided by nonprofit agencies under the JWOD Program have been recognized for outstanding quality and achievement. Recent honors include the Hennessey Award—the Air Force’s top food service award, the Ney Award for excellence in Navy food service and the U.S. Postal Service National Quality Supplier Award.

Why the emphasis on quality? Because the “bottom line” of the JWOD Program is not profit—it is employment for persons with severe disabilities, and preparation for the competitive workplace. That “bottom line” is achieved by ensuring JWOD employees are well trained and understand the importance of consistently providing quality work, when and where the customer needs it.

The following pages focus on several JWOD services. In addition to the capabilities specifically mentioned in this catalog, the JWOD team is capable of performing services unique to your agency and tailored for your specific needs. The only limits are yours!

ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Many Federal agencies are realizing the convenience and savings involved in contracting out administrative support—if the contractors' employees are well managed and capable. Whether it's Braille transcription, microfiche reproduction, order processing or the operation of a supply room, employees working on JWOD contracts perform administrative tasks skillfully and cost-effectively.

For example, the rapid expansion of technology has made data entry services more appealing than ever from a costing and management standpoint. People who are blind or otherwise severely disabled are handling a tremendous volume of data entry requirements with accuracy and efficiency. The same technology, in conjunction with complete occupational training, has opened up expanded opportunities for secretarial services.

Under the JWOD Program, persons with disabilities process files for the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office in Arlington, Virginia. Employees who are blind perform database management of Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS) for the GSA Paints and Chemicals Commodity Center in Auburn, Washington. In Nashville, Tennessee, JWOD workers furnish a variety of services for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, including the provision of information for volunteers. This service includes staffing a hotline, mailing information packets and providing feedback to the Corps on the number and types of calls received.

COMMISSARY SHELF STOCKING

More than one million families rely on military commissaries as their primary source for groceries. Many Commissary officers rely on the JWOD

Program to keep their shelves full, neat and clean. The Defense Commissary Agency (DeCA) has partnered with JWOD Program participants in developing a new pricing model for shelf stocking to ensure best value and to help determine best practices.

From Fort Eustis, Virginia, to Ellsworth Air Force Base in South Dakota, to Naval Air Station Cecil Field in Florida, commissaries chosen by DeCA as best in the nation are serviced by persons with severe disabilities. JWOD employees stock shelves at commissaries in Alaska, Hawaii and approximately 100 other locations. At many locations, large and small, JWOD workers provide custodial and warehousing services as well.

CUSTOMER SERVICE

Today, Government agencies view customer satisfaction as a necessity, not a luxury. As more Federal Supply agencies become industrially funded, it is increasingly important for them to better know their customers; yet they have fewer employees to obtain such information. The solution is the JWOD Program, with its highly motivated and skilled labor pool. JWOD customer service is often a blend of customer order-taking and telemarketing, with representatives trained to be knowledgeable in services rendered, products supplied and the process of providing these products to the consumer. Market research and customer surveys can also be performed.

Customer Service Representatives at GSA's Customer Supply Center in Franconia, Virginia, handle dozens of calls a day—taking orders by phone or by fax, verifying customer information, obtaining credit card authorizations and entering data into computers. They provide information about products and prices, trace orders and record customer complaints. Ten of these employees, including a supervisor, are legally blind, using adaptive equipment such as computers with text-enlarging or speech capabilities.
